Application:

Procain-e is a local anesthetic. Its hydrochloride is commonly used clinically, also known as "novocaine". White crystal or crystalline powder, easily soluble in water. It is less toxic than cocain-e. Adding a trace amount of epinephrina to the injection can prolong the action time. Used for infiltration anesthesia, spinal anesthesia, "closed therapy", etc. Except for the central nervous system and cardiovascular system reactions caused by overdose, allergic reactions are occasionally reported. Skin allergy test should be done before medication. Its metabolite p-aminobenzoic acid (PABA) can weaken the antibacterial efficacy of sulfa drugs.
